

Spring Surprises!

I am not sure why Spring's arrival keeps surprising me. Some years I wait in anticipation, longing for the first warm days to appear, delighted our land is renewing itself again. Other years I become accustomed to the brown and gray dullness of late winter, which I sprinkle with refreshing trips to snow-capped winter wonderlands.

Still, it seems sudden when shoots of tender green grass blades push through the dullness of winter's fading grasp. Spring begins to fill my view with emerging colors and I expect more - like the first note of a beautiful symphony about to be played. Then bursts of color from crocus, dogwoods, cherry and apple trees follow the first solitary buds. The return of color once again catches me off-guard while awakening my senses, my joy for life.

The familiar returns: fast walkers and lingering strollers stride forward as the world once again opens its doors. Sweet gifts of fragrance take me out of the "get it done" world of work and beckon me to appreciate all my senses.

Nature reminds me of its abundant gifts. Each day I discover presents...from the moment the birds sing with the sunrise to the squirrels playing tag through the day to the evening when I can, once again, sleep with windows open.

Spring is the symphonic prelude to summer's splash of color. It would be a shame to discover its beauty too late - once you finish digging through piles of paper work, making phone calls, and tackling "to do" lists.

Listen and watch as you are, once again, given another chance for renewal and growth. Find the color in your life and celebrate its joyous surprises.

P.S. Then it snowed again...
